arch_weekly note

Even with the Kansas winds blowing hard this week, they will not stop an exciting week. Our Professional Advisory Board will be in town starting Thursday with our main meeting on Friday. Like we have done in the past, they are hosting the annual Ask an Architect Panel Discussion at noon out at APD West. We will have free pizza to entice you to attend, but you will quickly find yourself immersed as our Student Advisory Board members ask juicy questions to illuminate the lives of real architects. Also, new this year, just before Ask an Architect, we will be hosting the Inside/Outside symposium with some amazing guest who have taken an alternative path in their careers. It starts at 10.45 AM in room 119 at APD West.

After the events, board members will be visiting studios so please feel free to introduce yourself and add to your professional network.

See you all Friday.

The panel_

Erin Gehle

BNIM | associate | director of communications

Erin uses her architectural education to enhance her role as Director of Communications for BNIM. She currently leads the firm's communications, public relations and social media outreach. In her career with BNIM, she has developed experience with graphic design, signage and branding projects that explore form, texture, detail and craft. Her passion for the power of words led her to graphic design, and ultimately communications, as an extension of her ongoing architectural studies and a companion to enrich the architectural experience. She has numerous book projects for the firm, including Power, about the Todd Bolender Center for Dance and Creativity and Nurture and Symbiosis, books that explore the design of two important projects at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston.

Tim Hossler

KU | assistant professor | visual communications

As the former in-house art director for photographer Annie Leibovitz Tim Hossler helped Ms. Leibovitz create her most memorable images, books and exhibitions of the late 90's through the early 2000's. Hossler holds a degree in Architecture from Kansas State University (1993) and a MFA from Cranbrook Academy of Art (2005). He was the Director of Design at the Massachusetts Museum of Contemporary Art (MASS MoCA) and the Art Director of The Wolfsonian-Florida International University in Miami Beach. Hossler currently teaches visual communications, design history and photo culture at The University of Kansas. His research is focused on working with artists, photographers and cultural institutions to create narrative work.
